

About the e-journal of Practical Business Research

The e-journal Practical Business Research contains publications arising from the authors' collaborations with industry partners. Its aim is to disseminate the methods, insights and findings used in practical management research. To be eligible for publication, all papers have to be methodologically sound and comprehensible, while real-life problem-solving comprises their central focus.

Outstanding students, research fellows and academically trained practitioners belong to our pool of contributing authors. The e-journal readership consists of professionals, researchers, lecturers and others who are interested in incorporating real-world case studies in their work.

The advantages that the e-journal brings to both authors and practitioners include:

- instant access to the latest issues and quick release of new material,
- cost-free reading and citation of contributions,
- wide global tracking enabled through their 'googleability'.

The question of quality assurance of submitted papers is treated as follows:

- All papers are subjected to a peer review check. Students' papers especially have to be approved and checked by their lecturer before submission.
- Comments on the respective papers can be made by readers through the e-journal, thereby allowing for a continuous qualitative evaluation of their content.

In all papers, emphasis should be placed on applying appropriate and lucid research methods, while the range of concrete results can be modified as required.

Please send all contributions to info@e-journal-of-pbr.de

Every exceptional paper should be publicly accessible. For practical business research enthusiasts, the platform on which to do so is <http://www.e-journal-of-pbr.de>